

Rivers's Victory Puts Him In the Front Rank For a Battle With Ritchie

PETER MAHER, JUROR

Tales Told At the Ringside

By W. A. Phelon

PETER MAHER was a kindly and obliging individual, as well as a strong and able fighter. He was also a firm believer in the duties of a citizen; he denounced the man who shirked his taxes, dodged his taxes or wriggled out of jury labor. An ideal citizen was Peter Maher, and he has shown it in a hundred ways since he took up his naturalization papers.

One afternoon in Philadelphia, long ago, Maher, sweat-soaked and panting, was just coming in from a run on the road, when he was seized in the firm grip of a big man with a star. "I want you, Mr. Maher," quoth this important personage, and Maher promptly gave tongue like a bloodhound. "I have done no more wrong," he howled. "I have injured nobody, and for why do you arrest me?"

The big man explained that it wasn't an arrest, but a summons for jury service, and that he, Mr. Maher, would please proceed at once to a certain courtroom. On being assured that the jury duties wouldn't last long enough to interfere with his coming ring engagement, and that there would be $2 a day besides, the patriotic soul of Mr. Maher was instantly in flames. "Lade on, me bould bucko," cried he, "I'm a rale American, I am, an' it's meself as is proud an' plared to hip th' lads an' coirts av me adopted country!"

As fate would have it, Maher was put into a jury which was trying one Cornelius Sullivan for an attempt to slay one Rastus Coburn, African. Of course, Mr. Maher could have no prejudice in favor of Cornelius Sullivan as against Rastus Coburn—Oh, no, none at all—but Mr. Maher took views of his own as to the case and the evidence therein.

The testimony was duly heard, and the jury retired. As the evidence seemed to show the guilt of the defendant, past all doubt, the judge waited in expectation of an early verdict—but he didn't get it. Hours were by. No verdict. The judge went home, with instructions to summon him as soon as a verdict was reached. Towards midnight, the bailiffs imagined they heard noises and the crashing of heavy bodies in the jury room, but no verdict was to be seen.

Morning came; the judge convened the court, and ordered the jury brought before him. As they filed in, it was noticed with some surprise, that several men had bruises on their faces and even discolored oculars. They were lined up, and the judge queried pleasantly:

"Gentlemen, have you arrived upon a verdict?"

"Peter Maher stepped forward.

"I hav, yer answar," said Mr. Maher, "but here are elevin av the most obstinate divils I ever met in all me days!"

FOOD FOR FANCIFUL FANS

CHARLES LEBDOUX, the bantam-weight champion of France, has announced his intention to come back to America next month. Low DeLocher, of Philadelphia, will look after the affairs of Leboeuf. The last time the little foreigner was here he fought hard, but hardly made enough to cover expenses.

The Marlin Tex. fans tendered the Giants the annual "fish fry" on their rest day after strenuous practice. Jim Thorpe went hunting after duck, accompanied by Dave Robertson and a Marlin youngster.

William Job will referee the 16-round bout between Mackie McFarland and Jack Britton on March 4. McFarland and Britton have signed articles to weigh in at 125 pounds at 3 o'clock, and each will post $1000 as a stakeholder as a fourth Britton says that he is well satisfied with the terms and is sure that he will not a square deal.

Jack Willard has been training for his bout with Jack Leon in Port Wayne, Ind., on March 5. Willard is down to beat training in preparation for the event as he expects a hard battle.

Eddie McGorty, the Oakbrook battler, who is matched to meet One Christie, of Milwaukee, in a 16-round bout on Feb. 27, at Fond du Lac, Mich., has begun hard training for the fight and several other bouts which he will participate in the near future. McGorty now weighs 166 pounds.

Before leaving Chicago on the spring training trip to the Pacific coast, president Charles A. Coniskey, of the Chicago American League baseball team took out accident insurance policies on the members of his team aggregating $350,000. Christy Mathewson wrote the risk for Coniskey.

A new record for the Hotel Clarion golf course at San Bruno, Fla., was made by John J. Rockefeller. He made the nine holes out in 26 and back in 24. Mr. Rockefeller was elated over his victory and celebrated it with a party. The old magnate spends his mornings motoring and many of his afternoons on the links.

The proposed 16-round bout between Joe Mandot and Charley White, of Chicago, scheduled at New Orleans on March 10, has been called off by the promoters. The managers want to substitute Leach Cross for White. Efforts will be made to clinch the White-Pal Moore bout at Kenosha, on March 10.

COURTHOUSE TEAM DEFEATS OLD GUARDS

Townclockers Bowl a Dummy and Win With a Margin of 98 Pins—Industrials Bowl Close Match.

The Courthouse townclockers walked the Old Guards Tuesday night at the Cactus, alleys by a margin of 98 pins. The victory came as a surprise, especially as a dummy was necessitated on the clock team because of the absence of Bill Foster. Sukerman rolled high total and game with a total run of 549. Weak games and totals were rolled by both quintets. Three of the four points were won by the Courthouse, the Old Guards taking the first game. J. A. Weaver scored high game and high total for the Old Guards with a run of 519. Only four members rolled above the 500 mark for a high total. This defeat for the Old Guards makes it look better for the Courthouse, the league leaders, as the Old Guards quintet is still in second place.

A close match was rolled by the Swifts and Millers in the industrial league. The match was won by the Swifts rollers by a margin of 19 pins. The industrial rollers are picking up in their games and higher averages are the result. D. Bowman rolled high game and high total for the Swifts. The match was a tie on points.

The following scores were made:

CHECKER CLUB FORMED.

TOURNAMENT PLANNED.

The Paso has now a real live checker club. The club was organized under the auspices of the local Y. M. C. A. Thirteen members are enrolled and the following officers preside: A. D. McLean, president; H. H. Carpenter, vice president; E. O. Nafe, secretary and treasurer. A checker library has been installed, and is the object of the club to have every member learn the "book play." Strict practice is the order for the next two weeks, and a prize tournament will be held early in March.

Those who have shown excellent talent so far are: A. D. McLean, P. O. Nafe, T. H. Campbell, J. C. Leeper, J. H. Harris, F. W. Braun, J. G. Cox, C. L. Melcher, H. H. Carpenter, E. L. Marshall, T. W. Marshall, Y. R. Magruder and J. Molante.

Owner of the Superbas Already Is Planning to Build "Invisible" Bleachers in Event His Team Gets Chance to Play in World's Series.

By W. J. MAC BETH.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Feb. 26.—President Charles E. Ebbets, of Brooklyn, has added a gem-uncle triumph to his list of discoveries, which while it holds the patron spellbound in admiration, cannot fail to enhance the beauty of the new Ebbets Field. The latest novelty is an invisible bleacher, which was on display for the first time at the 17th bi-monthly assemblage of the C. E. Ebbets Marching and Chord association in the Bedford avenue barracks.

The invisible bleacher might have escaped the notice of the charter members had not some stray question brought it to the mind's eye of the grand master of ceremonies. Some one asked Ebbets the seating capacity of his magnificent edifice.

"Thirty thousand, approximately," was the reply. "But I could accommodate fully twice that number should my team take part in the world's series."

A general whistle of wonder at this Ebbets one time had almost 30,000 packed on the playing field of Washington park, but such is against all odds of world's series.

"Yes, I could accommodate fully 60,000 if I had it," continued the grand master. "Out there is plenty of room" embracing the left and right field corners and the grandstands of Washington park, but such is against all odds of world's series.

"Within two weeks we could throw out substantial stands that would assure us the greatest seating capacity in America," continued Ebbets.

And Ebbets wished for the chance to put his invisible bleacher into commission.

Until a National league pennant graces the diligence of "Bad Bill" Dahlen, the invisible bleacher will not be used.

This handsome edifice needs no additions to make it one of the most wonderful plants of organized baseball. The stands and bleachers are of brick, steel and concrete, so up to date that

At present Rivers is taking the best of care of himself and is showing more class than at any time of his career. Had there been a winner in the Murphy-Wolcott fight, it is likely that Rivers would have been the victor.

The Wolcott-Murphy battle demonstrated that the ex-champion actually has recovered from the effects of his operation. Although he is not yet at top speed for 20 rounds, this makes him look like a very worthy contender for the lightweight title, which he lost to Ritchie.

There are few fighters harder to beat than Tommy Murphy. He has proved a stumbling block for many an aspiring lightweight and Wolcott should be satisfied in getting a draw with him.

Neither of these boys is out of the race for the championship. Billy Nolan and Ritchie are going to be kept pretty busy taking care of all the challenges from now on.

Clarence Ferns proved his class as a welterweight fighter when he defeated "Knockout" Brown in ten rounds in Vernon Cal. likely will be the opponent of Willie Ritchie, champion of the world, if the latter consents to fight in Vernon or San Francisco Independence day. This is due to the fact that he scored a clean knockout, while Ad Wolcott and Tommy Murphy battled to a draw.

Only on one occasion—when he fought "Knockout" Brown in New York in ten rounds in Vernon Cal. likely will be the opponent of Willie Ritchie, champion of the world, if the latter consents to fight in Vernon or San Francisco Independence day. This is due to the fact that he scored a clean knockout, while Ad Wolcott and Tommy Murphy battled to a draw.

Unless public sentiment forces him to otherwise, it is likely that Willie Ritchie will allow Freddy Welch of England to have the first crack at the world's lightweight championship, which event the battle will be staged by the National Sporting club, of London, in June or July.

Ritchie is not satisfied with the fact that Welch is claiming the championship of the world at 125 pounds by virtue of his victory over Ritchie in a 20 round engagement in London some time before Ritchie won a championship.

In that fight Ritchie substituted for Wolcott and gave Welch a hard battle, losing by a made. After Ritchie won the championship Welch claimed the title because he had beaten Willie.

Ritchie cannot be blamed for wanting to fight Welch under the circumstances. If he wins it will stop the claims of the Briton and if he loses Welch will be the bona fide champion. Too, Nolan and Ritchie know that Welch is a notoriously light hitter and cannot win a tough boy like the champion.

Welch is clever but not clever enough to outbox Ritchie by a wide margin. The champion will have an easier time with Welch than he would have with Rivers or Wolcott and this must be taken into consideration. An international bout of the kind will also draw as much as any fight in this country and Rivers and Wolcott will keep until Ritchie returns from England.

Marlin Youngster Surprises McGraw

Jesse Eddins, Former Player With the University of Texas, Makes Good Showing in Practice Work With New York Nationals.

By SAM CRANE.

MARLIN, TEX., Feb. 26.—Marlin may furnish to the national game a player who might be developed into a star. His name is Jesse Eddins. The youngster went out for practice with the Giants in company with another local player. Dupee, who is to play with Dallas the coming season.

They did not get much of a chance to show their speed until the Giants had finished their practice, but McGraw gave them a half hour's hard work that may result in young Eddins making Marlin famous. Eddins played at second base, McGraw being out first and Dupee at short.

The Marlin lad surprised the Giants' manager by the large amount of ground he covered and the handy way in which he gathered in grounders. He appears to be equally adept with either his right or left. The clean-cut way in which he picked up the ball showed that he had a great pair of hands and knew what to do with them.

"That boy looks good enough for me to keep my eye on. Did you see the way he covered ground. Why, he didn't make a fool of himself."

Eddins has never played professional ball. He played one year with the University of Texas team under a coach who told him he had the makings of a ball player, but he did not follow the game any more than to play occasionally with the local nine. He is about 20 years old and a rangy player. He did not have an opportunity to hit the ball, so no line could be had on his batting.

Many of the best players in the country have sprung from small towns in the "brushes," and there is no reason why Marlin could not furnish another Texan as brilliant as Tim Lincecum.

New Arrival in Camp.

There is a new arrival at the training camp in Glendale, Cooper, Cal. He is a player who played with the Port Worth club of the Texas league last year, and was secured by the New York club through draft. He is a left-handed thrower and batter and is as scar the build of Ty Cobb as can be.

He handles himself nicely. McGraw said of him: "He's great, but he shows marks of a player." McGraw has changed the morning practice period to begin at 9:15 instead of 10 o'clock, so as to allow the boys to have a longer rest at the lunch hour.

Under the old arrangement there was no lounging time at all between the morning and afternoon periods, because the bath and rubdown took up over an hour, and it was a case of hustle into Emerson Park immediately after lunch.

McGraw remarked in making the change: "You know these young players will eat anything. They are ravenously hungry after practice and they go from soup to nuts and then back again. They overload their stomachs and sufficient time is not given them for digestion they get out on the grounds for afternoon work laxy and with no pep. The old-timers know how to feed, but the bushers have to be watched closely and nursed like children."

Thorpe Is Shaky, But Sore.

Most of the players are suffering more or less from sore muscles and tendons of legs and arms, but they all gamely stick to their work and, under noon.
